Carol Stream, Ill. — December 11, 2007 – M2M magazine has selected MWA Intelligence, Inc. as one of the M2M 100 companies for 2008!

M2M (machine-to-machine) technology is about connecting people, devices, and systems and turns machine data into actionable information. It can be used to network physical assets for remote monitoring and telemetry applications.

Each year M2M magazine selects the top 100 companies which represent a mixture of established technology giants and nimble startups. 79 companies of the M2M 100 list from 2007 also made the 2008 list and one of these companies is MWA Intelligence, Inc.

Technology providers named to the 2008 M2M 100 directory were chosen from a compilation of over 300 companies gathered from various sources.

“We are honored to be named as one of the most influential M2M (machine-to-machine) solutions providers,” said Michael T. Stramaglio, CEO and President of MWA Intelligence, Inc. “Making the M2M 100 list two years in a row is a further validation of our commitment to developing and delivering leading-edge M2M (machine-to-machine) and M2P (machine-to-people) solutions around the world.”

MWAI enterprise-class Intelligent Device Management™ solution allows companies to remotely monitor, manage and service networked and non-networked assets at geographically dispersed customer sites, automatically collecting meter reads, maintenance codes, service alerts and more.
